

1-TO-2 POINT BOOST IN MEAT RATION ORDERED BY OPA ADMINISTRATOR, TO OFFSET DECLINE IN THE MEAT SUPPLY

As Result of Point Increase, Typical Consumer's Ration of Meat Will Drop from This Month's High Point of 2.7 Pounds per Week to 2.2 Pounds per Week During the Month of February.

By Phillips J. Peck

(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—(INS)—OPA Administrator Chester Bowles today ordered a one-to-two point boost in meat ration point values beginning Sunday to offset a decline of 200 million pounds in the civilian meat supply.

As result of the point increase, Bowles said, the typical consumer's ration of meat will drop from this month's high point of 2.7 pounds per week to 2.2 pounds a week in February.

The new point chart, expected to remain in effect until March 5, raises the point values of beef, lamb, veal and the choicest cuts of pork.

All cheeses are raised sharply in value, butter remains unchanged at 15 points per pound; lard goes up one point, to three points a pound, and canned fish—with the exception of oysters—is reduced four points.

The War Food Administration advises us there will be about 200 million pounds less meat in retail stores during February," Bowles said. "Because of this decline—which is the result of the normal tapering off in production at this time of year—none of us will be able to buy quite as much meat during the coming month."

The OPA chief added, however, that there will be sufficient brown stamp points in the hands of consumers to take up all the meat available. He said the OPA would rather risk a surplus of points and consequent shortages than "waste because of insufficient points."

The total February meat supply available for civilians was estimated at one billion, 400 million pounds, compared to the January figure of one billion 600 million pounds. Next month's estimate includes 750 million pounds of pork; 430 million pounds of beef, and the remainder in veal, lamb, mutton and variety meats.

While most pork cuts remain unchanged in point value, loin roasts, center and end chops, and tenderloin are raised one point. These items, the OPA said, are among the choicest cuts of pork and have become relatively scarce in some parts of the country.

The boost in lard and cheese points reflects recent consumer demand in excess of the supply available. Purchases of lard have been running consistently ahead of the 151,600,000 pounds allocated by the WFA for the civilian population in January, the OPA explained. December purchases exceeded the civilian allocation by about 12 percent.

Cheese consumption has far out-

Lyle G. Park, Aged 60, Dies at Parkland Home

PARKLAND, Jan. 27.—A Parkland resident, aged 60 years, died this morning in the person of Lyle G. Park, who passed away at his home, here, the husband of Elizabeth M. Park.

Mr. Park had been an architect, following this profession until 6½ years ago when he lost his sight. He was an honorary member of Parkland Fire Co.

In addition to his wife, a son, Joseph G. Park, Washington Crossing, an engineer connected with the New Jersey-Penna. Joint Bridge Commission; and a daughter, Mrs. Ernest Darmuth, of Parkland, survive. Mr. Park also leaves three grandchildren.

The service will be conducted by the Rev. John P. Cranston, Jr., pastor of Parkland Chapel, on Saturday at 11 a. m., at the Horner funeral home, Langhorne. Interment will be in William Penn Cemetery, and friends may call Friday evening.

Miss Anna M. Smyth Is To Be Buried Saturday

OXFORD VALLEY, Jan. 27.—Miss Anna M. Smyth died yesterday afternoon at the home of her niece, the Misses Mary B. and Henrietta Nowell, Edgewood Road, where she resided.

Miss Smyth is survived by the Misses Nowell; a nephew, Willis E. Nowell, of Maitland, Fla.; and a sister, Miss Eleanor Smyth, Oxford Valley.

The Rev. Henry Cunningham, pastor of Bensalem Presbyterian Church, will officiate at the service at the Horner funeral home, Langhorne, on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. Burial will be in Beechwood Cemetery.

Biklen Given Commission; Fleetwings Grants Leave

A leave of absence has been granted the public relations director of Fleetwings, Division of Kaiser, Inc., Paul Biklen, who has been granted the commission of Ensign A-V (S), U. S. Naval Reserve.

Ensign Biklen will enter upon his course of training tomorrow at Fort Schuyler, N. Y.

During his absence the public relations work will be handled by Lloyd J. Derrickson, a member of the Fleetwings public relations department.

Poles Consider Findings of Commission

London.—The Cabinet of the Polish Government in Exile was expected to consider at a meeting today the findings of a Soviet Commission which investigated the slaying of 11,000 Polish prisoners of war. In a detailed report released yesterday the Russians stated that the executions in the Smolensk area were carried out by the Germans in August and September of 1941. The victims were buried in mass graves in the Katyn Forest.

The London Daily Sketch said the Polish Government was expected to accept the Soviet findings without making any comment in view of the particular delicate situation brought about by the Katyn incident.

Commons Welcomes News of Argentina's Attitude

London.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden stated in the House of Commons today that the British Government welcomes the news that Argentina "has at last abandoned her neutrality."

He said Britain confidently expects that the rupture in diplomatic relations with Germany and Japan will be followed by immediate and effective action against the whole spy organization in that country and that Axis agents will be expelled.

Eden expressed hope that steps also will be taken to end all undesirable enemy activity in Argentina.

The Foreign Secretary disclosed that Argentina had requested British aid in investigating action of Axis agents and has told Argentina that Britain will gladly help. He added that the British Government has been in close touch with the United States Government on the matter of enemy espionage in the South American country.

Allied Invasion Forces Advance Steadily South of Rome

Algiers.—Allied invasion forces south of Rome advanced steadily inland today after repulsing crack units of the Nazi Hermann Goering Division which were rushed northward from the Gustav Line.

The spearhead of Allied armored units met the enemy mechanized force south of Littoria, 12 miles east of captured Nettuno. The Allies cleared the battlefield of 129 Nazi dead after the Germans were driven back in the initial clash of armored forces.

Overhead Allied bombers hammered rail and road communications north and south of the landing area over which the enemy is attempting to bring up reserves. In the limited air action three Nazi planes were destroyed. Two Allied craft were reported missing.

Reinforcements were being poured steadily into the Allied beachhead to bolster the American and British troops already ashore for the expected Nazi counter-attack.

WILL DISCUSS MEANS OF NABbing STAMP THIEVES

Union Horse Company Members to Turn Attention To Stamp Thieves

WILL MEET FEB. 5TH

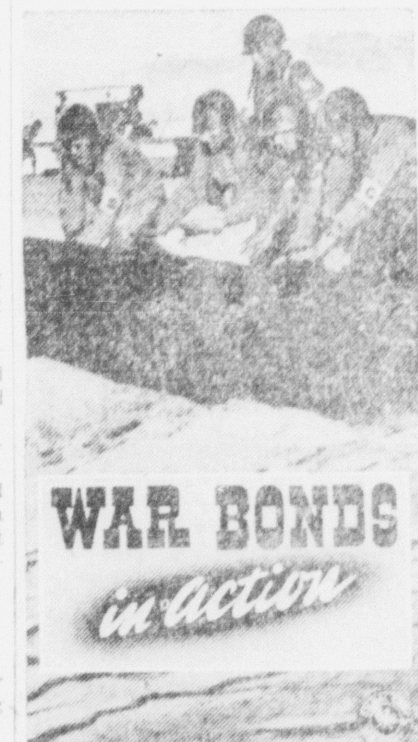

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 27.—The 110th annual meeting and banquet of the Union Horse Company that is headed by President Judge Hiram H. Keller of the Bucks county courts as president and barn boss, will be held at the historic Fountain House here on Saturday noon, February 5, the secretary and keeper of the stud book, George MacReynolds announced today.

This event annually attracts notables whose ancestors hunted horse thieves in various sections of Bucks county. Although the "annual" is more or less of a frolic, this year's meeting will be devoted to ways and means of catching, not horse thieves—but rationing stamp thieves.

Other officers of the company that was organized Dec. 6, 1834, at the public place of Jacob Fries, here, Doylestown became a borough are as follows:

Vice-presidents and stable attaches, James B. Fretz, Arthur M. Eastburn and William L. Moore; treasurer and keeper of the feed bag, Rudolph Hein, now in the United States Navy. There are a long list of directors and detectives.

At last year's banquet a "touching" canvas by Unioneer Earle K. Bergey of Doylestown, well known artist was unveiled, depicting that the Union Horse Company "bunked" Adolf Hitler and Company. It was a painting of a Jackass with Hitler on the tail-end. The canvas hangs in the dining room of a local hotel.

On the beaches of Italy, in the jungles of the Pacific—planes, tanks, artillery must move—and fast; no waiting to build roads or airfields. That's when our soldiers must unroll these "steel mattresses" as you see them in this photo. Your War Bonds pay for them.

3-A REGISTRANTS NOW POTENTIAL 1-A MEN

Directed To So Advise Their Employers; 3-A Classification is Out

SEEK CO-OPERATION

"All registrants who are now classified in Class III-A and who are working as farmers or in defense plants are directed to advise their employers that they are on record as potential I-A men," states the Selective Service Board No. 1, with offices here in Bristol.

The III-A classification is no longer in existence and registrants presently in this class are being considered for reclassification into I-A. It is stated—

In the cases of registrants deemed as necessary men in defense and other essential activities Forms 42 or 42-A should be completed by the employer and forwarded to the office of the Board within the next 30 days.

To facilitate the work on local boards it is urged that all 3-A men comply with the above request. It is further urged that all employers cooperate and submit their requests within the five-day period.

No Crashes Reported In Spite of Fog; Mercury High

No accidents were reported at the headquarters of Pennsylvania State Police, South Langhorne barracks, during the night or this morning, in spite of the heavy fog. Traffic moved slowly on all highways as vision was considerably hampered.

The fog was accompanied by high temperatures, the mercury remaining in the fifties from one until six p. m., yesterday. The highest recorded at the Rohm & Haas Co. weather observatory was 57 degrees. The lowest temperature for the 24-hour period ending at eight this morning was 32 degrees. Percentage of humidity was 90.

Day of Recollection And A Retreat Planned

TORRESDALE, Jan. 27.—Miss Mary Collins is captain for the Day of Recollection to be held at the Shrine of the True Cross on February 6. The Very Rev. Frederick T. Hoeker, C. S. Sp., will conduct the exercises.

The day will open with Holy Mass in the Shrine Chapel at nine o'clock, and will close with the Victory-Peace Holy Hour at 4:30 p. m.

Women desiring to spend a day in prayer are invited to contact the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament, Torresdale, Phila. 14, (phone Tor. 7110); or Miss Mary Collins, 7023 Hegeman street, Phila. 35 (phone May 9677).

A special retreat or time of prayer will be conducted by the Rev. Edward J. Stokes, S. J., for war brides and those contemplating marriage. The retreat will open on February 11, at eight o'clock, and will close February 13, after the Victory-Peace Holy Hour.

For those who are unable to attend, arrangements may be made to go to the Shrine on Saturday evening or for Sunday only.

While their husbands are defending our country, wives may show them their love and devotion by spending the days in prayer for a speedy victory and their safe return.

Mrs. Dolores Berkery, Mrs. Ann Dougherty, and the Misses Helen A. Cwikla, Catherine Morrison, and Lillian Donachie are organizing the retreat.

WORLD PRAYER DAY TO BE MARKED HERE

Date Set is February 25th in St. James' Episcopal Church

UNITES ALL NATIONS

At a recent meeting of representative members of the various churches of Bristol, held at the home of Mrs. William Duhamel, Idleliffe street, the World Day of Prayer to be held Friday, February 25th, at 8 p. m., at St. James' Episcopal Church was planned.

One of the most hopeful and remarkable things about the United States is the quality of its women," said Walt Whitman many years ago. Calling attention to the forthcoming service, a member of the local committee says: "We should keep in the long procession of those pioneer women who half a century ago saw in the spiritual aspects of Christian growth the world's best hope."

"Looking back to the year 1887, we find Mrs. Darwin H. James calling the Presbyterian women in the United States together to pray for their national missions. Year by year other denominations joined in this day of prayer for our country. Then two popular women with wide vision and organizing enthusiasm, took a trip around the world and discovered in every land that church women felt identical devotion to the Kingdom of God and identical courage in meeting the divine call forever sounding in their ears. Therefore on their return to America, Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery and Mrs. Henry W. Peabody suggested a day of joint prayers for home and foreign work.

START EXHIBITS OF INDUSTRIES IN THE SCHOOLS OF COUNTY

Products Made in Bucks County To Be On Hand For Children To Study

MORE TO BE ADDED

Interest Increases and Movement Meets With Much Favor

Exhibits of Bucks County industries have been started in circulation in Bucks county schools during the past week, as a result of a conference of industrial representatives, Bucks County Board of School Directors, and the County Principals' Association. The number of exhibits in use are constantly being added to by the industries located in and near Bucks County. Thus far, several industries indicated their desire to cooperate in maintaining a county audio-visual aids division. It will be carried out by the Bucks County Education Library. The industries are supplying information in many forms for use in the schools. A few of the industries are providing motion pictures. Most of the industries are submitting exhibits of either the process of manufacture or the use and distribution of their products.

The movement began as a result of last week's meeting of industries of and in nearby Bucks County and the Bucks County schoolmen, when Superintendent Charles H. Boehm, speaking for the schoolmen, solicited the cooperation of the industrial representatives in this new educational venture. All of the representatives present were enthusiastic in their support of a program to give to the schools interesting and authentic information concerning the importance of local industry. Other avenues of cooperation were mentioned at this conference. There were no formal addresses. Undoubtedly other areas of cooperation between the schools and industry will be explored at subsequent conferences. George Pfundt, of the General Machine Products Company of Philadelphia, was one of the three leaders of industry who asked for more meetings of this type in the future. It is known that the employment personnel of industry is particularly anxious to learn more about the school records and training programs. The representatives of industry were surprised to find that the schools had loaned physical training teachers to set up an organized recreational program. In the war emergency they were anxious to use high school students after school hours along the lines that are now in practice in Sellersville and Bristol.

Stanley Renton, of New Rochelle, New York, who is president of the Board of Directors of the Vulcanized Rubber Company, which has been located in Morrisville since 1882, expressed the position of his industry on the need for good schools. He said: "We are interested in efficient and economical local government, which we believe we have in Bucks County. We believe, as do other representatives of industry, that if two or three mills of local taxes are needed to make the difference between fair schools and good schools, then the raise in the tax rate should be forthcoming." The Vulcanized Rubber Company is the largest real estate taxpayer in Morrisville. Mr. Renton is especially interested in local government, is taking an active part in improving the local government at New Rochelle. He was the first to indicate the desire of the industries of Bucks County to meet with the schoolmen for the purpose of exploring avenues of mutual concern.

Warren Blotch of the Sloan-Blabon Lignum Corp. of Trenton, spoke at the meeting on the advisability of industries operating locally with the schools. He said, in part: "We are well familiar with the encroachment of Federal authority and the many restrictions placed on industry in the last decade. It seems to me, that one way to counteract such influences is to make our position understood at home in our respective communities. In this respect the program of emphasizing the significance of industry in our local schools is a grand opportunity for industry."

Walter Delashmatt, of the Kings Supply Company, expressed the point that industry would cooperate in this program and would help to put across more information on the county and local areas as well.

Melvin Freed, owner of the Freed Glass Company, said: "I have been trying to sell this idea for several years; I believe it has unlimited possibilities. I want the school people to know what my plant is doing."

ECONOMIC ALSO-RAN

Military blows are not the only adverse circumstances being suffered by the German war effort, according to an analysis of the situation by British economic experts. Germany is taking a beating from Allied bombers; she also is getting less co-operation from neutral nations.

Sweden, formerly an extremely valuable source of raw materials for the German war machine, has cut down considerably on her exports of rich iron ore to Germany.
Swiss factories which formerly produced munitions for Hitler are reported switching to the manufacture of toys and other articles in anticipation of peacetime trade.

And British experts expect Turkish chrome and Portuguese wolfram to become increasingly hard for the Germans to get for their war plants. Neutral nations can read the handwriting on the wall as well as anyone else—and, at times, perhaps a little better.

The British economists emphasize that time is one of the most important factors in war. They point out that the bombardment of German factories and the dropping off of imports from neutral nations both do great damage to the German timetable.

The German locomotive industry, for example, was geared to reach maximum production to coincide with the greatest extent of the occupation of Russia late in 1943. The peak was late. When the locomotives finally began to appear in large numbers they were just in time to take part in withdrawal of the German forces from Russia.

It's the same story with fighter planes. They were planned for greatest volume to coincide with the peak of the Allied bombing assault. They weren't delivered in sufficient numbers in sufficient time, a fact which set the German war program even farther back.

The growth of neutral coolness toward Germany and the continued increase in Allied air pressure are a combination destined to prove that Germany's inability to win an economic and industrial foot race with the Allies augurs her certain military defeat as well.

WASTE NOT, WANT NOT

One of the many things the Wacs are learning is to "waste not, want not." This especially applies to food. In most mess halls a sergeant stands at the door as the girls file past with trays on their way out. The Wacs are required to stack their empty dishes on trays and place them on the dishwashing counter.

If a Wac has left food on her plate the sergeant taps her on the shoulder and remarks, "You better dispose of the food you took and haven't eaten." There is but one way to dispose of it. Wacs, who are figure conscious, find this a sufficient reminder.

One of the worst offenses is to leave butter on a plate. That either results in having to go but-terless for a couple of days, or performing a trick at kitchen police. According to press releases from the Army, meat is never left on a plate and beef-hungry civilians are mistaken if they picture soldiers and Wacs reveling in thick, juicy steaks.

This Week's STAR RECIPE

By BETTY BARCLAY

This week's "Star" recipe is a regular war-time recipe for it describes a hot, healthful and delicious dish that calls for practically no precious ration points.
Try it once and it will be a "regular" on your table:

Corn En Casserole

2 tablespoons chopped green pepper 3 tablespoons finely chopped onion 3 tablespoons butter or margarine 2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard 1 1/2 cups milk 1 1/2 cups bran flakes, finely crushed 2 cups canned whole kernel corn drained 1 egg, well beaten Place green pepper, onion, and 1 tablespoon butter or margarine in saucepan and cook gently until tender. Add flour and seasonings and stir until smooth. Add milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add 1/2 cup flakes, corn and egg. Turn into greased 1 1/2 quart casserole. Melt remaining 1 tablespoon butter or margarine and pour over remaining 1/2 cup flakes.
Toss lightly to mix. Sprinkle over top of corn. Bake in hot oven (400° F.) 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

school program as a whole. An Industrial advisory committee is being set up to explore areas of mutual interests.

POPULATION SHIFTS SEEN

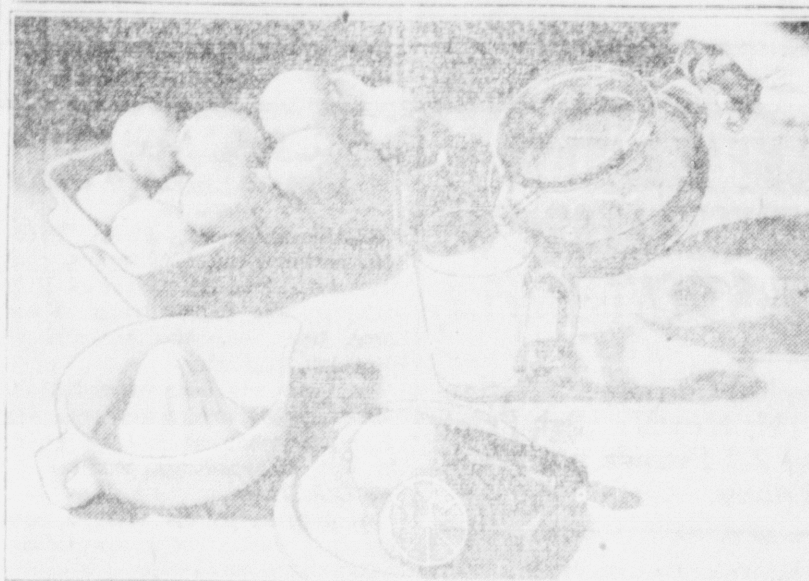

WASHINGTON (INS)—Dr.
Philip M. Hauser, assistant director of the Census Bureau, declares in a survey that the United States will face a post-war population problem with wide changes in traditional trends. Covering 137 metropolitan

Drink Your Health in A Daily Glass Of Lemon Juice and Water

By BETTY BARCLAY

"Fighter, first class on the home front!" That's the name we'd like to give to the man or woman who punches the time clock on the dot every day and walks briskly into the office or factory, or gets out the morning or the washing machine and start work with energy and to spare for a hard day ahead.

"U. S. means us strong." Is more than a slogan. It's a statement of vital need. Your health and vigor will play an important part in winning the war. Keeping well is the home front soldier's way of keeping fit.

Rules for Keeping Fit Right food, sufficient rest, some exercise outdoors every day so that the body gets oxygen, cleanliness of body including proper elimination—these factors are most important in keeping well. Make sure you are getting them. They will do much to keep you fit.

At this season when colds and flu are prevalent, it is especially important to see that the body is rested, is kept at the right temperature, has the right food and maintains good elimination.

Elimination Is Important In connection with the best suggestion, a simple home remedy comes to mind as a helpful aid. This is to drink the juice of a lemon in a glass of hot or cold water each morning on rising.

Nothing complicated about this idea.
No big words on a prescription blank.
It's a simple home remedy that everybody followed the year around.
The habit of taking this drink may save you days at work and save the time of a busy doctor, who is thankful that you are not another patient.

Lemon and water is a natural mild laxative, adequate in providing all the regulation most people need. When this drink is taken every day, harsh laxatives become unnecessary. In drinking lemon and water, you know that you are taking—not a medicine—but a healthful food. Lemons are in group 2 of the Basic 7 food groups which Government authorities recommend that we eat daily.

Prevent Colds, If Possible Beside adding elimination, lemons add digestion, supply important vitamins and build body resistance. This fruit is one of the richest sources of vitamin C, which combats fatigue and helps the body resist colds and infections.

If you are taking a daily glass of lemon juice and water, you are building resistance that makes you less likely to catch cold or flu. Should one of these health snafus sneak up on you, however, you can call on resistance in the form of an extra dose of lemon and water to help break up the condition.

At the first symptom of "sneezes", coughing, sore throat and muscular fatigue, see that the kitchen has a supply of at least a dozen lemons.

On the first day, drink a glass of lemon and water every 2 to 3 hours.
Some persons like to add 1/2 teaspoon sugar to the juice. Others like a dash of soda to each glass, drinking the mixture as foaming quinine. Since this drink is taken at once, the soda does not appreciably reduce the vitamin C furnished by the lemon juice.

If you are going to bed, the drink may be made very hot. This will increase perspiration. Be sure not to get chilled at this time. If you are away from home, a sealed quart can mix lemon and water or lemon, water and soda drink for you.

While your cold lasts, continue with the lemon and water, adding soda if liked, and taking three or four times a day.

Other rules to follow are:
1. Keep warm, avoid further chill.
2. Eat lightly. Take plenty of liquids, especially citrus juices.
3. Get plenty of rest, overcome fatigue build resistance.
4. Keep elimination regular.
5. Alkalinize your system.
In case of serious illness a physician should be called.

THE LITTLE DOG BARKED by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Linda had hung herself on my arm, was hugging it in unrestrained giddiness. One Paulsen, with Colby and Bill Parrie were talking to me steadily, Bill about fifty, the two others of last night's out-even Sandra gave up her isolation to add an affected, "So sorry, money, so terribly sorry!" to the general effusions.

The worse think was more than I could stand. The lump on my head began to throb painfully, and my swees were so wobbly I wanted to let go and collapse where I stood. Until Linwood put new strength into me, temporarily.

Linwood had been standing by himself, with compressed lips and glancing at his wrist watch. Suddenly he shouted angrily, "Stop all this nonsense and get to work!
I'm sick of waiting. I'm here to direct an Amrose play, not an ovation for Mrs. Turner."

The gratuitous insult made me see red. And seeing red made me forget my throbbing head and weak knees.

I pushed my newly acquired admirers aside and marched up to the director.

"Sorry to correct you, Mr. Linwood," I told him coldly. "You are here to direct my play. And I mean my play. If you had a good look at the title page of the script, you'd have known that Mr. Amrose concedes me first place, as chief author. Go on rehearsal for the troupe here. But not for Broadway!
Oh, no! Not for Broadway! Unless on mysterious attack of old man, small dogs and defenseless women kills me before I can tell Mr. Mc-Vane that I won't have you—your foe-to-the-highest-bidder turn-out!"

That was as far as I'd get, when the floor seemed to rise and tilt, and the walls started wavering. But I took a stern grip on myself, stalked out of the stage door, and walked towards the Snack Hut.

I was halfway to it when I saw Welland, all out of breath, caught up with me.

"I had to follow you," she gasped.
"I had to say 'thank you' for what you said to Tom. He had it coming to him. He—"

I suddenly broke off, and trotted beside me mutely, to the very door of the Hut. There she grasped my arm and stammered:
"You must think me crazy—being pleased about the way you've raked my husband over the coals. But—you don't understand, you can't—I don't believe any longer that Bill Parrie cut the rope or did anything.
I'm sorry I ever said I was thinking of our dear, dear director!" Such a terrible fear—thank you again."

Then she scuttled off, back to the theatre. While breakfasting, I kept puzzling over her "terrible fear" in connection with the "found belief in Bill Parrie." He would have gone on puzzling about it, if Orne Paulsen hadn't come in and sat down opposite me in the booth.

"Linwood's just been dragged off to the Inspector for questioning. No more rehearsal this morning," he told me. "And not much chance for work in the afternoon either, with Linda having to go to that inquest.

A wonderful show we'll put on Monday—at this rate! Believe me, I'd like to see the producer who can get me to do a country trout after this!
Which reminds me: any word from McVane?"

"Indirectly. His office wired he's planning to be here Saturday," I said between bites.

"Saturday! That's day after tomorrow! Two more days of lagging after Linda!" Paulsen groaned.
"Some job, I tell you—trying to protect that girl, when she's got such a treat as Parrie, she'd think it was a treat being killed by him!"

"Then you really believe Bill Parrie is it?" I asked.

"Sure. Don't you?" Paulsen looked surprised. "To me, there's no doubt left after last night. Honestly, I can't understand why Inspector Pettengill didn't arrest him on the spot, it was so clear. Going for a manuscript and returning without it—after just enough time to run over to the inn and half strangle poor Linda!"

"Linda says it wasn't Bill," I told him.

Orne gasped for a second and then grimaced ironically. "Oh, Linda does?
Ain't love wonderful!"

I didn't answer. Just went on eating. And after a while Paulsen shrugged and said: "Well, so much for Linda! What about you, Mrs.
Turner? Do you think it was Bill, or—?"

"I'm keeping an open mind," I informed him, debating with myself how best to lead the talk to Linwood.
"After all, there are other possibilities."

He looked puzzled. "Other—? Oh, you mean Vickery was out and about the crucial time also? But—no, he hasn't the nerve. Nor have Alden, or Bill's old man. And—who else would want to ruin your play by such desperate measures?"

For a moment, I was at a loss what to answer. Then I saw the light.

"Oh—they could have hired someone to do their killing," I said, swallowing the last bite of my belated breakfast and pushing the plate aside. "And that makes me think of something I meant to ask you, in connection with your last night's alibi."

"Connection with—my alibi?" Paulsen looked so bewildered I almost laughed.

"Yes. Your alibi and Sandra's," I insisted complacently.

He stared at me for a second, then broke into giggles. "Oh, I see! You're caught on to that! You're thinking of our dear, dear director!"

heart-throb. And I still don't see how it fits in with her reported engagement to the not-so-young Loring."

"I could have told him exactly how it fitted, but I only said, 'Don't ask me, I wouldn't know, and don't want to know, their private affairs.
And you shouldn't bother about them to the extent of withholding information from the police.'"

"You mean—I should have broken my promise and told on Sandra?
With her standing there, seared silly that I'd do it?" he asked reproachfully.

"I mean just that," I assured him.
"If you know what's good for you, go to the Inspector right now and tell him the whole truth. But first, you might tell me: Did Linwood stay with you all the time, until you took Sandra here to the Snack Hut?"

"Why—why, no," Paulsen still looked puzzled, but rather as if something were dawdling on him.
"He left us—let me see—on fifteen, twenty minutes before. Said he'd better get back to his frau and scrambled up one of the small paths to the theatre road. I don't think I could point out which one. There are so many. But it was quite a way down toward the cove. And then Sandra and I walked back. At a snail's pace. She kept begging me not to give her away and—"

"He broke off and gave me a worried glance. 'You—you don't mean—?'"

"On the contrary, I do mean, and very much so," I told him, getting up to leave.

Paulsen followed me out; then boggled: "Don't run away, please!
You've got me all muddled and just have to straighten me out. I can see you suspect Linwood. He's a slippery customer all right. But—be-reasonable! Why should he side with a bunch of has-beens against an important producer like Mc-Vane, and writers like Stuart Am-rose and you? It would be professional suicide, wouldn't it?"

"My answer was a noncommittal shrug. But something in my face must have given me away. For Paulsen suddenly whistled and said:
'Or am I an idiot? Is this Alden-Vickery plot, so-called, a smoke screen for something else? Good grief, it must be! Only a lunatic would go around murdering people and attacking them and burning up little dogs, to spoil a summer tryout!'"

I shrugged again, and he said understandingly: "Okay, so you won't tell me, or perhaps you've got your orders and can't. Thanks just the same. You've found a great helpful. This is little Orne runs to Inspector Pettengill and makes a clean breast of yesterday's omissions. And—as for you: do me the favor and don't get deeper into this than you can help. I don't know—but after talking with you just now —I have a feeling it isn't over. So please be careful! I don't want you to be among the casualties."

"Frederick!" I helped her out.
She nodded. "Yes, I reckon that's what I mean. Had you been there when I heard you—go away!"

"Long enough to learn that you

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

My substantial meal had done me a world of good, and my talk with Orne Paulsen had helped even more.
I felt positively elated as I walked back to the inn. Proud of my successful sleuthing, I was impatient to hear what Inspector Pettengill would say to Paulsen's amendment of his last night's statement.

I'd better write all he'd said down, in addition to Burns Loring's story which I had promised the Inspector. And went to the desk for my key.

Just as the clerk was handing it to me I heard Sandra's voice behind me, saying in her most affected Southern drawl: "Mrs. Turner, honey—may I have a little visit with you?"

Sandra looked very beautiful—all in her usual white, a woolly knitted dress this time—but I didn't like her expression. She was smiling, with her lips only. Her eyes were serious, almost haunted, and showed she had come for a purpose—to find out more about the investigation, or to take me to task for my forceful speech to her "Honeybees" Linwood.

I had no wish to discuss either, but I hid my dismay as best I could and said: "Certainly. Let's go to stairs." Presently we were sitting in my room, each looking at the other warily.

"I came to tell you how desperately sorry I am about your little dog," Sandra opened the conversation.

"Thank you," I said conventionally.

"And that dreadful attack on Linda! Your nerves must be all shut to pieces. I'm sure I would have died in your place!" The words dripped affection. "I almost fainted when that policeman came and dragged us all over here, for questioning. The very idea there might have been another murder was making me ill. And you, being so brave and—"

Her voice trailed off—she'd probably learned the trick from Linwood—and she glanced at me in her most pleading manner.

I returned the glance. Then Sandra heaved a sigh and said plaintively: "Why don't you help me, honey? You know I'm here to —to talk of last night. The cabin on the cove shore—you know?"

So Sandra had seen me. I hadn't been sure. Neither she nor Linwood ad given a sign....

"Yes? What about the—cabin on the cove shore?" I asked coolly.

She made a helpless gesture. "Oh, nothing. I reckon it was fate. No one ever caught on to it before. My sister—using it. And you found us right away."

"Without trying," I assured her.
Sandra sighed again. "That makes it all the more—all the more—"

"Frederick!" I helped her out.
She nodded. "Yes, I reckon that's what I mean. Had you been there
when I heard you—go away!"

"Long enough to learn that you intend marrying Burns Loring—if you can—so please the successor you hope to give him," I told her bluntness.

"And did you—recognize the other voice?"

So that was it. Linwood, knowing he had talked in whispers, had sent Sandra to find out if I'd recognized his identity....

World Prayer Day To Be Marked Here

and South American adopted the first Friday in Lent as a time when Orient and Occident, and Africa, should pray together, the significant word "World" was prefixed to the name of this "Day of Prayer" with one universal worship service used everywhere to bind us all into one family.

"The World Day of Prayer covers the seven seas, and is observed on all the six continents." All women should be especially interested in these days when their children have gone to the uttermost parts of the world as members of the armed service.

1-to-2 Point Boost in Meat Ration Ordered by OPA paced the civilian supply, partly because many people have been using it as a substitute for butter, the OPA asserted. The February table lists cheddar cheese at 12 points, up two, and cream cheese, creamed cottage cheese and neuf-châtel at 10 points, also a two-point boost. Swiss, muenster, brie and the other rationed cheeses are up four points, to 12 per pound.

OPA said a small, seasonal increase in butter production is anticipated for February making it unnecessary to raise point values of this product. January's butter output was estimated at 135 million pounds.

The supply of canned fish is being augmented by the distribution of the 1943 pack, thus permitting the four-point reduction in point values. The decrease applies to canned salmon, tuna, and all other rationed canned fish except oysters. The latter remain at four points a pound.

In the canned meat classification, dried beef is raised two points to 16 per pound, while pork sausage, beef tongue and Vienna sausage are cut two points each. A reduction of one point is made in meat loaf and luncheon meat, while sliced dried beef in the bulk is listed at 14 points, up two from the January table.

Other meat changes:
Beef—Virtually all steaks, up two points; roasts, steaks and hamburger, up one point.

Veal—Shoulder chops, round steak and boneless shoulder roasts, up three points; other steaks, chops and roasts, up two; steaks, up one.

Lamb—Mutton—Loin, rib and leg chops, up two; roasts and steaks, up one.

Pork—Center and end chops, tenderloin, loin roasts and Canadian bacon, up one.

KNOW YOUR STATE

In the past war years there will be large opportunities for Pennsylvania manufacturers to expand their South and Central American trade. Our Commonwealth has always been a large user of the products of the nations to the south of us. In 1940, 70 per cent of Philadelphia's imports were derived from Latin America. The industries of our State are heavy consumers of manganese, sugar, cocoa, vanilla and linseed, and our general public is a large consumer of coffee and tropical fruits. To balance these imports, post-war Pennsylvania will be able to supply to its Latin American neighbors many of the manufactured products most necessary to their industrial development.

★ This Week's STAR RECIPE

By BETTY BARCLAY

Here is a "Star" recipe that might be called "Save Your Points Savories" but when ration days are over it can take back its maiden name "Fish Savories". It's a combination of flaked fish, egg, cereal and seasonings that will delight and surprise your guests. Be sure and try it before filing the recipe:

Fish Savories
3 cups Post Toasties, slightly crushed 1 cup flaked cooked white fish 1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1/2 teaspoon scraped onion 1 egg, beaten with 4 tablespoons milk and dash of salt Combine 1/2 Post Toasties, fish, salt, pepper, onion, and 5 tablespoons egg mixture, mixing well. Shape in 2-inch cakes. Roll in remaining flakes, then in remaining egg mixture, and roll again in flakes. Fry in skillet in small amount of fat, browning both sides. Serve with tartar sauce or lemon slices. Makes 6 small savories.

opment and many of the goods most eagerly sought for in their markets.

As America's largest producer of electrical generators and steam boilers, Pennsylvania is in a position to participate in the large electrical development in prospect for many South American countries. As America's largest producer of railway equipment and of steel rails, the Commonwealth should have a large part in the development of systems of rail transportation necessary for establishing closer communication among the Latin American Republics.

As the leading State in the fabrication of many types of light metal and plastic products, and of alloy steels and glass, Pennsylvania can supply Latin America with the latest types of products developed under the stimulus of war.

The large prewar market for silk hosiery in Latin America provides a new opportunity to Pennsylvania's great textile industries, many of which have adapted their machinery to the use of those new synthetic fibers which may in time largely replace natural silk. The full development of the mutual advantages of Pennsylvania's immense post-war productive capacity and of the rich stores of raw materials and tropical products available from Latin America should insure closer relations between this Commonwealth and all the Southern Republics.
